Executive Director

2020, as for everyone, was a challenging year for AWB. The pandemic forced us to adapt to its immediate realities while keeping in mind the longer term. With international working visits suspended, AWB did not in any way suspend its operations. Many existing projects continue online and new projects are being implemented at a distance.

An unexpected effect of working online has been that we can now work in countries where the risk to volunteers prevented travel prior to the pandemic. In addition, we are developing a new series of programs in areas of high demand that can be offered promptly and effectively remotely.

Testimonials

“Working on this AWB project with Aga Khan University was a culminating career highlight for me. My takeaways are all positive and I wish to support AWB in any future capacity possible.”

- Mary Katherine Rose, AWB volunteer, Brock University - Project supporting curriculum development in population health, Aga Khan University Medical College, Kenya

“The participation of the emerging leaders was the most inspiring part of this workshop, which I believe will boost the overall quality of educational attainment in the university in the long run. This collaborative exchange may stimulate the departmental leadership to make substantial reforms in their individual departments in particular and university in general.”

- Dr. Salma Nazar Khan, Fatima Jinnah Women University, Pakistan - Project to support establishment of a centre for learning excellence with AWB volunteer, Kathleen Matheos
